Self-Critique Statement

I used a sage green color scheme to create a simple, user-friendly website with an aesthetic that suited this project. While CSS emphasizes responsiveness and consistency, the HTML framework incorporates semantic components to enhance user readability and accessibility. Sticky notes were utilized to provide additional content and foster user interaction without overwhelming the main text. The modular design is for self-directed learning by guiding users through different sections and information. Although I do like my design, I think there could be improvements that could've been made with more practice. I would improve responsiveness for smaller devices to ensure a consistent user experience across several screen sizes.
